The Gold Flood of 1921

The flood of gold into the United States which ebbed somewhat after reaching its peak in 1917 has set in again and there is now probably a greater supply of the precious metal in the country than at any other time in its history. This flow and what the present stock of gold in the United States means in terms of the world supply is the subject of a bulletin issued from the headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

Gold the aristocrat of metals is truly cosmopolitan, says the bulletin, and is found in a greater or less extent in every part of the world. It is the only metal that is found in the country that is the subject of a bulletin issued from the headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

TRY PESTIFEROUS HOUSE-FLY.

War to the death should be declared upon the little pest. His presence is a disgrace. If there is no dirt and filth there will be no flies.

Keep the flies away from the milk.

Don't allow flies in your house. Don't buy food stuff where flies are tolerated.

Don't let a fly crawl over baby's face or hand.

Don't let flies near baby's food or nursing bottle.

Clean up your premises inside and out, and then see that others do the same. Fly the at the root of the evil. The housefly breeds in horse manure, kitchen chaff, and the like. Dispose of these materials in such a way that the housefly cannot propagate.

Screen all windows and doors and insist that your grocer, butcher, baker and everyone from whom you buy food stuffs does the same.

There is more health in a well screened house than many a doctor's visit.

"Not all the gold produced since the discovery of America is available. Much has been used destroyed or lost in the form of jewelry or plate or in circulation and not in treasure. The best available estimate of the gold in circulation and in treasuries places the amount at $9,000,000,000 or enough to make 90 of the foot-thick dollars. Just about a third of this world treasure is now in the United States and this is not far below the amount that has been yielded by the mines of the United States.

The United States leads all countries and even some continents in the aggregate amount of gold produced—$3,310,000,000. Africa and Australia have each produced more than the United States. South America, Russia and Siberia, more than one and a half billion for a number of years. The Rand section of the Transvaal, South Africa has led all gold producing countries in output of the gold producer around 10 per cent of the world output.

Ban the Undesirables

Cleveland Herald

Recent disclosures relative to the enticement and cash with which passports to America have been granted by foreign countries have put the wisdom of Congress in restricting immigration.

Report, reaching the bureau of immigration from the department of labor reveal traffic efforts to get out of the United States and on the part of alien from southern and eastern Europe to reach this country before the Dillingham law becomes effective. These reports say that the United States is the center of a great number of immigrants arriving from the other side. The other day the steamship Asia docked in New York with 800 prospective citizens. 50 per cent of whom will be sent back to Greece from which they came because of their physical unfitness. Apparently the authorities, handling the passports of such undesirable, have been quite willing to overlook the imperfections of applicants feeling that the countries from which they come would be well rid of them.

America is ready and willing to welcome desirable residents of the Old World and will receive them as rapidly as they can be assimilated. The growth and prosperity of America depend upon new blood and it must be of the right quality. It goes without saying that we have far more of the undesirable gold than we need and unfortunately many of this class lay claim to full citizenship.

Not only have we been far too lenient in our treatment of those who knock at our doors but we have kept the bars down far too long. We have indulged in foreign nations that we have quite willing to accept whoever they might wish to send and at our word from now until the barrier is put up we intend to make the most of the opportunity to stamp out our shores the very scum of the earth. And they will do so unless we are alert to the menace.

The Sunday School And Bolshevism

Hartford Post

Our American Bolshevism and the part sympathizers of the Red and Trotsky will resent a movement for the rebuilding of the Sunday schools. In a number of cities in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh the newspapers have been coöperating in a movement to increase Sunday school attendance and a very great deal of interest has resulted in movement carries as a prominent feature the use and availability of the Sunday in combating Red influence. It seems the along with Bible study and religious instruction those concerned in the movement would include the teaching of patriotism.

American intellectuals who are not at all satisfied with their country and who wish their liberties are circumscribed will be increased if the Sunday school program is carried out. The Sunday school is a great American institution and could be made of far greater weight and power in the nation. Its field is a broad one and it might well include in its curriculum the teaching of obedience to law. Nothing would be more consistent with its purposes than the inculcation of a patriotism which is strictly in accord with right living as taught in the Scriptures.

WELL IT HADN'T ANYTHING TO DO WITH THE RAILROADS

From the time I was a child I have been interested in the railroads. I have seen them from the inside and from the outside. I have seen them from the inside and from the outside. I have seen them from the inside and from the outside.

INDEPENDENT MANAGEMENT CONFIDENT IT HAS WINNER

EVERY POSITION NOW SEEMS TO BE FILLED WITH RIGHT KIND OF TACKLER.

FIRST BASEMAN A FIND

The management of the Connells-ville Independents is now confident that it has a team assembled that will compare favorably with the best of this section of the state. The club feels that it has been judiciously criticized on account of the first several games, but the players then trying out were all men of reputation who undoubtedly merited a chance to wear a Connellsville uniform. But, well-known as they were, no player could be judged until given the opportunity to play. Whether he still "has the goods" or not.

The present line-up of the Independents is an exceptionally strong aggregation, but it is apparent that it is Fisher at short is "off" his game to some extent.

Stauffer, at first, who incidentally is covering first for the love of the sport only, refusing to accept any remuneration for his services, is a "find" of the first magnitude. The Scottsdale youth's fielding of the initial station was a revelation to the fans who saw him work Saturday, and he will become more valuable to the club as the season advances.

"Cy" Moser, former Washington & Jefferson star, at second, is a handy player and should balance the infield considerably. Moser is fast and backs up every play that takes place. Lablek, at third, will "shine" before the season gets advanced. Sammy is really a great third baseman, fast and with a good "whip".

Hobbs, at first, is where he belongs. Hobbs is a natural out-fielder and was used at second only because no one in the previous games could fill the gap. Francis, in middle, is the same old chip, and high ones are sure outs. Fung, feel that Francis should realize that the field is much faster this season and should play accordingly. Smittler, filling right field, is a valuable player to the club. He can fill in all positions should the occasion arise.

Jones, behind the plate, put up a good game the last time out, and should prove to be all that characterizes a good catcher. Tommy's stick work is an improvement over past seasons.

The pitching staff could hardly be improved upon. Herrod showed in his first start of the season he is entirely capable, and will improve as the season wears on. Hauser has given a good game, a very capable moundman and is always ready to start. Of Zaube, the recruit twirler, the club feels that with proper coaching he will eventually be pitching regular ball.

Fans are of the opinion that Field Manager Sheila Hauser should inject a little more pep into the game. A suggestion is that Hauser should stay on the bench and instruct his players as they go to bat, letting others take the coaching stations. It is also apparent that no signals are in vogue. This is entirely up to Hauser to remedy.

The management of the club, it is said, intends to weed out any players who fail to put up the game they are capable of, no matter where the axo falls. The management will meet with the fans' full approval, since they are the ones supporting the game here, and supporting it largely.

Cokers Put Stop To Winning Streak Of Malone Club

In what many fans think was undoubtedly the best baseball game of the present season here the Connellsville Independents Saturday afternoon defeated J. P. Malone's Herron Hill club at Fayette field, 5-1.

The contest was featured by a dispute over a decision by Umpire Warrick, which threatened to bring it to an end before the allotted time. In the eighth inning, Umpire Warrick ruled that the bases were not cleared for the victors, had dropped a line drive in the fifth inning, three Connellsville runs resulted, the team left the field. After some delay the players returned and the game was resumed.

Each team scored two runs in the opening inning. The Malones forged ahead in the third, adding two more. The exciting fifth put the locals one run to the good and they maintained the lead, that ending the scoring.

Herrod pitched a life game for the locals, even though two more hits were chalked against him than his opponent, Tappa. Herrod whiffed nine batters. His opponent accounted for "five" by the strike-out route.

The victory of the Cokers ended a winning streak of the Pittsburg team, which had rolled up six straight games. The defeat at the hands of the Independents, after the rather poor showing made thus far, was not pleasing to the visitors.

Two new players were tried out. Stauffer, of Scottsdale at first was a revelation. His services are gratis. Stauffer played with the University of Virginia up to the summer vacation period. He refused several offers to play in the Virginia league.

Moser, second baseman, is a former W. & J. star, and was for a time coach of the college team. He is a real asset to the team.

Both were signed for the season.

JACK QUINN CLAIMS "SPITTER" IS FAIR

Pitchers Using Moist Ball Have Not Been Invincible.

Yankee Hurler Denies Abolishment of Spit Ball and Says Arguments
Against It Are Not Sound—
Walsh Was Effective.

"The spit ball," declares Jack Quinn stoutly, "is no more a freak delivery than the curve ball." The Yankee pitcher, an exponent of the spit ball, soon to be extinct, seems to be sincere in his belief that it is all right. He denies its abolishment and holds that there is no good objection to it.

"It is no more a freak delivery than the curve ball," he repeated, "not a bit more. It never hurt anybody, and no spit ball ever was invincible. Those are the objections raised against it by the baseball people, and not one of the arguments is sound."

"There never was an invincible spit ball pitcher, never one to threaten the extermination of the hitter, which bugaboo was raised against the spit ball pitcher. The nearest to invincible we ever had was Ed Walsh, but

Immigrants' Money Sent Abroad Helps Our Foreign Trade, Says Banker

Noted Economist Not Disturbed By Outward
Money Movement

By GEORGE E. ROBERTS
Vice-President, National City Bank of New York

GEORGE E. ROBERTS

I AM not disturbed by the reports of large sums of money being taken from the country at this time by returning immigrants. I think it a natural movement, and one calculated to ally excitement over the immigration question. The returning movement largely offsets the incoming movement over which some people are much alarmed, and as for the money they are taking, that is serving a good purpose in helping to correct the exchange situation and sustain our exports.

In the first place, the presumption is that every dollar taken out of this country by immigrants has been honestly earned by the creation of its equivalent of wealth here. If that is true we have lost nothing on the immigrant who returns, and have gained by the contribution he has made to the permanent development work which we have needed.

In the second place, he seldom takes cash abroad with him; the most advantageous way to take his money is by converting it into the depreciated currencies of Europe at the high premium which our money commands. If he takes our paper money with him that is what he will do on the other side, and our money will come back. Whether converted here or there it creates credit in this country which enables the foreign countries to make purchases here.

We have all been wondering how the enormous trade balance of the United States was being settled. Of course, in all calculations allowance has been made for the remittances of immigrants and for the amount of funds by great numbers in taking, but very likely we have not allowed enough. At any rate, the immigrant's money is a very large factor in sustaining our export business at this moment, and it could not be put to better use. He is a saving link between Europe and America, a great factor of better relations, and of enormous mutual benefit.

I am not in favor of restricting immigration at this time. If it is true that millions want to come, the idea of letting them die of starvation on our door step is repugnant to every instinct of humanity. It is not true that we cannot care for all who will come or find work for them. Even if it were true, as has

Declared Immigration
Necessary to Maintain
Country's Food Production

work are barred from the country? One of our great problems is to increase food production and it will continue to be a great problem. Many farmers of Europe would naturally till the soil here, if they were directed to it instead of the industrial centers.

There are lands here to be cleared and brought under cultivation. Millions of acres of cut-over lands await development. Who is to do this, if we keep out the Europeans who would welcome the opportunity to do the pioneer work necessary to make these waste places bloom?

It may be remarked, in passing, that intelligent and broad policies, upon the part of those who hold title to these lands, in dealing with the immigrants who would settle upon them, are a necessary factor to success.

Our population is steadily growing and our food supply is not keeping pace with this increase. The deputy commissioner of immigration of North Dakota told the Senate Immigration Committee that there are 20,000,000 acres in that state not under cultivation.

"Simply because we haven't sufficient people to cultivate them." A distinguished witness before that committee testified that his father, an immigrant had worked as a track-hand on the Northern Central Railroad. The son, who testified, is a prominent New York attorney.

We, ourselves, are much to blame if we have failed properly to assimilate the immigrant, for, as a rule, those who have come have been willing to work hard, save, educate their children and, in a word, been productive factors.

"I am, therefore, fully in accord with the movement to assure an impartial, official study of all the facts relating to the effects of past and probable effects of future immigration upon our national development. The problem has not had the consideration it deserves at the hands of our people and we are now in the position of adopting temporary expedients as a result."

Now—This article is one of a series by leading authorities who are co-operating in a nation-wide effort to arouse the public to a realization of the need, so strikingly pointed out by Frances A. Keller in her recent work, "Immigration and the Future," for an adequate official study of all phases of the immigration problem.

BASEBALL NOTES

The J. B. Kirsopa of Pittsburg will be the attraction next Saturday at Fayette field.

Whitney has been signed for two games on the fourth, the first at 10:15 and the other at 3:15.

Stauffer, playing at first, showed he is the "sweetest" first baseman that has appeared at Fayette field this season.

"Cy" Moser, former W. & J. star, is a fast second baseman, playing bang-up ball, covering entire infield. Both signed for balance of season.

Tough Valley and Whitney are both agreeable to form a league. A meeting will be arranged shortly to draw up schedule.

The United Berthens and Christian teams play this evening at 5:30 at Fayette field in the third game of the Church league. Tomorrow night the Lutheran and Methodist Protestant teams will be matched.

CHAPTER XIV.

In Which Abe Returns From Vandalla and Is Engaged to Ann, and Three Interesting Slaves Arrive at the Home of Samson Traylor, Who, With Harry Needles, Has an Adventure of Much Importance on the Underground Road.

Abe came back from the legislature to resume his duties as postmaster. The evening of his arrival he went to see Ann. The girl was in poor health. She had had no news of Abe since January. Her spirit seemed to be broken. They walked together up and down the deserted street of the little village that evening. Abe told her of his life in Vandalla and of his hopes and plans.

"My greatest hope is that you will feel that you can put up with me," he said. "I would try to learn how to make you happy. I think if you would help me a little I could do it."

"If you want me to, I will marry you, Abe," said she. "I cannot say that I love you, but my mother and father say that I would learn to love you, and sometimes I think it is true. I really want to love you."

They were on the bluff that overlooked the river and the deserted mill. They were quite alone looking down at the moonlit plains. A broken sigh came from the lips of the tall young man. He wiped his eyes with his handkerchief. He took her hand in with his and pressed it against his cheek and looked down into her face. "I said I could tell you what is in my heart. There are things that I could tell you, but I shall not try to tell you. Words are good enough for politics and even for the religion of most men, but not for this love I feel. Only in my life shall I try to express it."

He held her hand as they walked on in silence for a moment. "About a year from now we can be married," he said. "I shall be able to take care of you, then. I think. Meanwhile we will help each other to take care of yourself. You don't look well."

He kissed her cheek and he kissed her when they parted at the door of the tavern.

"I am sure I shall love you," she whispered.

These are the best words that ever came to my ears," he answered, and left her with a solemn smile of his commitment.

Soon after that Abe went to the north line of the county to do some surveying, and on his return, in the first week of May, came out for a talk with the Traylor.

"That was the 28th of May, 1835, a day of much importance in the calendar of the Traylor. It had been a clear, warm day, followed by a cloudless, starry night, with a chilly breeze blowing. Between eleven and twelve o'clock, Samson Traylor was awakened by the knock of an owl in the doorway. In a moment they heard three taps on a window pane. They knew what it meant. Both got out of bed and lit their candles as quickly as possible. Samson lighted a candle and put some wood on the fire. Then he opened the door with the candle in his hand. A stalwart, good-looking mulatto, with a smooth-shaven face, stood in the doorway.

"Is the coast clear?" he whispered.

"All clear," Samson answered, in a low tone. "The coast is clear," said the negro, as he disappeared in the darkness, returning promptly with two women, both very black. They sat down in the dim light of the candle.

Harry, who had been awakened by the arrival of the stranger, came down the stairs.

"These are fugitive slaves on their way north, and Samson," "Take them out to the back. I'll bring some food in a few minutes."

Harry conducted them to their hiding place, and when they had entered the back room, he closed the door and went to the top of the stairs. A knock came at the door and he opened it.

and Harry walked up the road in silence. The negro followed in the middle. Peasley had caught Biggs' horse and was standing at the roadside.

"I want to find a justice of the peace," said Biggs.

"There's one at the next house above. I'll send my boy for him," Peasley answered.

The Justice arrived in a few minutes and Biggs lodged a complaint founded on the allegation that his slaves were concealed in the hay on Samson's wagon. The hay was removed and no slaves were discovered.

"I suppose they left my niggers at the house below," said Biggs as he mounted his horse and, with his companion, started at a gallop in the direction of Brimstead's. Samson remained with Peasley and the Justice.

"You had better go down and see what happens," he said to Harry. "We'll follow you in a few minutes."

So Harry walked down to Brimstead's.

He found the house in a condition of panic. Biggs and his helper had discovered the mulatto and his wife hiding in the barn. The negroes and the children were crying. Mrs. Brimstead met Harry outside the door.

"What are we to do?" she asked, tearfully.

"Just keep cool," said Harry. "Father Traylor and Mr. Peasley will be here soon."

Biggs and his companion came out of the door with Brimstead.

"We will take the niggers to the river and put them on a boat," Biggs was saying.

His face and shirt and bosom were smeared with blood. He asked Mrs. Brimstead for a basin of water and a towel. The good woman took him to the washstand and supplied his needs.

In a few moments Samson and Peasley arrived.

"Well, you've found them, have you?" Peasley asked.

"They were here, as I thought," said Biggs.

"Well, the Justice says we must surrender the negroes and take them to the nearest hiding for you. We've come to do it."

"It's better treatment than I expected," Biggs answered.

"You'll find that we have a good deal of respect for the law," said Peasley.

Biggs and his friend went to the barn for their horses. The others conferred a moment with the two slaves and Mrs. Brimstead. Then the latter went out into the garden lot to a woman in a sunbonnet who was weeding with a hoe some fifteen rods from the house.

Mrs. Brimstead seemed to be conveying a message to the woman by signs. Evidently the latter was deaf and dumb.

"That is the third slave," Brimstead whispered. "I don't believe they'll discover her."

Soon Peasley and Samson got into the wagon with the negroes and drove away, followed by the two horsemen.

In a little village on the river they stopped at a low frame house. A woman came to the door.

blow out his breath and said in a low tone:

"Say, I'll tell you. I ain't had so much excitement since Samson Traylor rode into this valley. The women need a chance to wash their faces and scrub up a little. Let's you and me go back to the creek and go in swimmin' an' look the farm over."

"What become of the third nigger?" Harry asked.

"She went out in the field in a sunbonnet an' went to work with a hoe and they didn't discover her," said Brimstead.

They had their swim in the creek and got back to the house at dinner time. Samson had returned and, as they sat down at the table Harry asked: "What have you done with the third slave?"

"She's been upstairs, getting washed and dressed," said Mrs. Brimstead.

As she spoke, the stairway door opened and Elm entered the room—in a silk gown and slippers. Her hair had been put up and she had a look of surprise on her face, but had not extinguished her beauty. All her thoughts had been bent on hastening to the creek and the day, like Brooks coming down from the mountains, had arrived suddenly. She was in a way prepared for it. She had taken thought of what she would do and say. He had not. Still it made no difference. Quickly they fell into each other's embrace, and the depth of their feeling was many times what we read in the diary of the rugged and rather stoical Samson that no witness of the scene spoke or moved.

"Until I turned my back upon it for shame of my tears."

Soon Elm came and kissed Samson's cheek and said:

"I am not going to make trouble. I couldn't help this. I heard what he said to you last night. It made me happy in spite of all my troubles. I love him, but above all I shall try to keep his heart as clean and noble as it has always been. I really meant to be very strong and upright. It is all over now. Forgive me. We are going to be as respectable as—us we can."

Samson pressed her hand and said: "You came with the slaves and I guess you heard our talk in the wagon."

"Yes, I came with the slaves, and was as black as either of them. We had all suffered. I should have come alone, but they had been good and faithful to me. I could not bear to leave them to endure the violence of that man. We left together one night when he was in a drunken stupor. We took a boat to Alton and caught the Star of the North to Beardstown—there I hired a team and wagon. It brought us to the grave near your house."

"Why did you disguise yourself before you came?"

"I longed to see Harry, but I did not want him to see me. I did not know that he would care to see me," she answered. "I longed to see all of you. Now I am ready to go to my father's house—like the Prodigal Son coming back after his folly."

"But you will have some dinner first," said Mrs. Brimstead.

"No, I can not wait—I will wait. It is not far to Hopedale."

CHAPTER XV.

Wherein Harry and Abe Ride up to Springfield and Visit Kelso's.

Illinois was growing. In June scores of prairie schooners, loaded with old and young, rattled over the plains from the East. There were many from Kansas from Ohio, New York and New England in this long caravan. There were almost as many Irish, who had set out for this land of golden promise as soon as they had been able to save money for a team and wagon, after reaching the new world.

There were some Germans and Scandinavians in the great clouds of the National road. Steamers on the Illinois river scattered their living freight along its shores. These were largely from Kentucky, southern Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia. The call of the rich and fertile lands had traveled far and streams of life were making toward them, to flow with increasing speed and volume for many years.

People in Sangamon county had begun to learn of the thriving village of Chicago in the north. Abe said that Illinois would be the Empire state of the West; that a new era of rapid development and great prosperity was near. Land was in great demand and there were many transients of title. Abe had more surveying to do than he was able to accomplish that summer. Harry was with him for some weeks. He could earn two dollars a day with Abe, whereas Samson was able to hire a helper for half that sum. Harry made a confidant of his friend, and when they were working at the northern end of the county they borrowed a pair of horses and rode up to Kelso's house and spent a Sunday there.

Samson met them down the road a mile or so from Hopedale. She, too, was on the back of a horse. She recognized them before they were in halting distance and waved her hand and hurried toward them with a happy face.

"Where are you going?" she asked.

"To see you and your father and mother," said Harry.

A sad look came into her eyes. "If I had a stone I would throw it at you," she said.

"Why?" Harry asked.

"Because I have to get used to being and the pony and read my sign book. You come along in a few minutes. By the time you overtake me I'll be ready to get into the saddle."

"You can ride with us," Annabel suggested.

So the young man brought his saddle and bridle and put it under the seat of the buggy and got in with Annabel and her small brother.

Some five miles down the road Harry found Abe, riding between the horses, holding the reins with his forelock. The horse was snorting and bridled, while the buggy went on ahead.

TURN FOR BETTER IN THE RAILROAD SITUATION IS HERE

Is Conviction of the Leading Chief Executives of the Big Roads

ALL HAVE UTMOST FAITH

In the Transportation Act as Agency to Reestablishment Roads Hampered by Increased Expenses and Under-Maintenance of Operating Facilities.

Among the railroad executives who have testified before the Senate committee on Interstate Commerce there has been exhibited a measure of hopefulness that the railroad situation is in the course of being cleared up. Expressions to this effect were made by Julius Kruttschnitt of the Southern Pacific, Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, and A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central.

Mr. Kruttschnitt in his statement said in part: "I do not want to be understood as pessimistic. I believe that the situation is clearing, and that readjustments of the operating expenses of the railroads will produce a much brighter outlook, and make it possible to effect more readjustments of rates with consequent benefit to commerce and industry generally."

"I believe the Transportation Act of 1920 was one of the best pieces of work that Congress has ever done, and I should be extremely reluctant to see the act modified, amended or changed before it is given a fair chance to prove what it can do. I was a firm believer, and am still, in the act. There may be some points where the machinery is still operating with friction on some hot spots, but I think that, as we will smooth these down, and it ought to be operating well, I should dislike extremely how to see it tinkered with or changed."

In his statement Mr. Willard said: "I don't believe it will be necessary to raise rates beyond what the traffic will bear to make private ownership a success. It was not necessary before the war, and I don't think it will be necessary after the war, once we get adjusted to that our income and our expense bear some proper relationship to each other, which they do not at this time."

"The Transportation Act of 1920 does, in fact, make the future successful operation of railroads possible as privately owned and operated properties. That I thoroughly believe. It is necessary, of course, if there are to be any railroads, that they should cooperate effectively in order to carry out the spirit of the act. The railroads are attempting to do that through several agencies, and particularly through a new agency, the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives."

"It is expected that substantial reductions will be secured in the rates of fuel for 1921. In fact a number of contracts have already been made effective as of April 1, much under last year's prices. Other material prices are showing a gradual decline, and as materials and supplies now in stock are consumed and gradually replaced with materials purchased at lower figures, there will be reduced charges to expenses on this account. It is expected that the cost of operating costs. Meanwhile the railroad representatives, in conference with the Interstate Commerce Commission are making such rate adjustments from time to time as are found necessary in order to remove inequalities and re-establish proper relationships."

Time and money spent will ease the ill of the railroads, said President Smith.

"The railroad management, hampered by the necessity of underwriting the operation of the property burdened with the large increase in expenses, with under-maintenance of way and equipment and further burdened with the additional increase of expenses by reason of the orders of the Labor Board, moved last January that was offered during 1920, and endeavored to make substantial progress toward restoring the property to the standard which the best judgment considered necessary to enable it to do properly and safely the business of the public."

"The enormous increase in operating expenses have been in the main due to the great war. War necessities broke through and largely destroyed normal conditions in the industrial world. The materials of war had to be supplied at any cost by labor and material. This situation had to be met in the railroad world, and it was met. The world ended, but normal conditions could not at once be restored. That restoration will come through time and patient effort, but pre-war or normal conditions, and a normal cost of living can only be restored by general reduction in the cost of both labor and materials. Realizing, as we do, that the world has definitely turned the corner of its most acute depression, so we feel that the railroad situation has likewise passed through its darkest hour and has now definitely turned for the better."

THE MEN'S STORE

40 Boys' Suits—$5.75

Will your boy be one of those lucky fellows to get a suit at so low a price?

All the colors and styles that boys 11 to 18 wear will be found in this lot and we predict with confidence that some boys are going to try on—and buy—two or three, for we hesitate to say how long it has been since such suits were found at such a price.

—and don't forget Double Stamps save 46c more.

Boys' Wash Suits—$2.95

When one is two and a half or 8 and starts out to see the world, it is well to be wearing a wash suit—

Then shipwrecks in a brook, or unexpected mishaps on dusty roads won't be such a tragedy when one gets home.

Here is one big lot of the very clothes mothers are buying for adventurous boys. Some few are soiled and some were originally to $6.00.

This lot is being closed out—hence its low price.
